Market Overview:
The market remained generally stable throughout the week, with only minor fluctuations observed in key commodities. Below are some highlights:

- Soybeans: Prices stabilised in the US after a dip on Friday morning from higher than expected USDA production data. However, prices were supported by strong demand from Asian buyers, particularly China. The phase one US-China trade agreement is likely to provide a boost to global trade, although concerns remain about the ongoing trade war.

- Wheat: Prices in the US fell on expectations of lower US stocks, which led to technical selling. However, prices recovered slightly on news of lower US exports.

- Soybeans: Prices stabilised in the US after a dip on Friday morning from higher than expected USDA production data. However, prices were supported by strong demand from Asian buyers, particularly China. The phase one US-China trade agreement is likely to provide a boost to global trade, although concerns remain about the ongoing trade war.

- Wheat: Prices in the US fell on expectations of lower US stocks, which led to technical selling. However, prices recovered slightly on news of lower US exports.

Local Market Insights:

- Maize: Prices remained relatively stable, with the exception of a slight increase on Friday morning. Analysts expect the price of maize to remain stable until the end of the year, with a potential increase in the first quarter of 2020 due to higher demand from consumers.

- Soybeans: Prices stabilised on Friday morning, with the exception of a slight increase on Friday afternoon. Analysts expect prices to remain stable until the end of the year, with a potential increase in the first quarter of 2020 due to higher demand from consumers.

International Market Insights:

- Soybeans: Prices stabilised in the US after a dip on Friday morning from higher than expected USDA production data. However, prices were supported by strong demand from Asian buyers, particularly China. The phase one US-China trade agreement is likely to provide a boost to global trade, although concerns remain about the ongoing trade war.

- Wheat: Prices in the US fell on expectations of lower US stocks, which led to technical selling. However, prices recovered slightly on news of lower US exports.

Latest Market Information:

- Maize: Prices remained relatively stable, with the exception of a slight increase on Friday morning. Analysts expect the price of maize to remain stable until the end of the year, with a potential increase in the first quarter of 2020 due to higher demand from consumers.

- Soybeans: Prices stabilised on Friday morning, with the exception of a slight increase on Friday afternoon. Analysts expect prices to remain stable until the end of the year, with a potential increase in the first quarter of 2020 due to higher demand from consumers.

Contact:

For any queries, contact: ikageng@grainsa.co.za

Thank you for the Maize Trust for partially funding this project.